

Is a Charitable Donation Right For You?

Donating your land to a charity is one option to consider when planning for the legacy of your land. When looking into this option, it is good to do your research.

First step? Think about your long-term goals for your land. Do you want it to be used for research or education? Then maybe a donation to a university would work for you. Do you want it to stay a working forest? Then a land trust might be a good option to explore. Because the next step is important, making sure that your long-term goals match those of the charity that you'd like to include in your legacy plans.

For each potential charity, complete the following

Name

Location

Contact

Website

What kind of donation will they accept? Will they accept land?

If yes, what are their conditions of accepting land?

Does these conditions align with your stewardship and legacy goals?

Your Legacy, Your Land

Celebrating 75 years of the American Tree Farm System, a program of the American Forest Foundation